W. R. Hopkins, member from Finney county and one of the originators of the scheme is making his canvass for speaker on this issue and the further fact that the west saved the house to the Republicans

Editor Morris, of the Garden City Herald one of the new state advocates said to-day "The recent election taught the people of western Kansas one fact and that is that they are dominated in all things by the east and more populous counties. Western Kansas repudiated calamity howlers and repudiators. It labored hard to maintain and did maintain its credit and honor Nearly every county in the eastern end of the state gave the calamity party majorities which will destroy the value of every foot of property in the eastern part of the state and has forced upon us a governor and state officers who are obnoxious to the people of the west. It was the eastern district that saddled Jerry Simpson on us and we want the new state line to cut those counties out

"The state house of representatives was all the Republicans saved from the wreck and it was the western frontier that saved that, four out of every one sitting a Republican member Eastern Kansas may be bankrupt, but our section is not

"The east has always dominated in politics, it has framed our laws forced railroad legislation upon us that is adverse to our interests and now, to add insult to injury has forced us to swallow a noxious dose of calamity The interests and wants of the two sections are widely different.

"The state is large enough to divide and our people are armed for the fray and do not propose to stop, but will push this movement until western Kansas appears on the map of the Union as a separate and distinct state."

Panama Canal Frauds.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—There was a scene of wild excitement to-day in the chamber of deputies. Jules Delahaye, the Boulangist deputy from Chinon, raised the question of the Panama canal prosecutions He denounced the government in the severest language, stating that the authorities had flagrantly neglected their duty and had permitted the gravest and most colossal crimes to go unpunished. He demanded that justice be done speedily and that the men of influence and wealth accumulated by gigantic frauds be brought to exposure and punishment. There was a clamorous scene while Delahaye was speaking, some applauding and others denouncing his utterances. Angry recriminations followed, and deputies charged each other in express terms with desire to protect the guilty ones The speaker claimed that he could point out men in the chamber who had shared in the spoils. A dozen deputies rose in an excited manner to ask whom he meant. The answer was lost in the clamor and confusion Members shook fists in each others faces and several tried to climb the tribune at once The president rapped for order, but nobody seemed to heed. The noise was more general and disgraceful than any within [illegible] in the chamber during the present republic. Deputies called each other thieves and followed the resulting words with a challenge to the death No less than three challenges were given for duels. M Alexis De Lanjuinais, moderate Republican and deputy for Beaucron, challenged Antoine Germaine, deputy for Tresvaux and member of the left center. Boissy D'Anglais, member from D'Arcine, challenged M Delahaye and Paul Deloulede, the noted Boulangist challenged M. Hubbard of Seine Et-Pine, anti Boulangist It was a bitter struggle and the first really signal demonstration of the Boulangists since the downfall of their party It was useless for the government to oppose the onset, and so the ministry yielded by consenting to the appointment of a parliamentary commission to inquire into the charge of corruption in connection with the Panama canal and especially the charges affecting public officials, members of the chamber and others connected with the public service The commission is to be named to-morrow and will begin the inquiry forthwith. It is rumored that gigantic scandals will be unearthed and other suicides may be looked for besides that of the Baron Reinach, who was one of the men most deeply involved in the alleged scandals The baron left an immense fortune of about three hundred million francs, much of it accumulated in connection with the Panama enterprise There is great excitement in Paris and the scene in the chamber of deputies, and the Panama investigation are the topic of conversation everywhere The police are said to be keeping a quiet surveillance over several wealthy men mentioned in connection with the Panama frauds, and who are suspected of a design to leave France in order to escape prosecution

CITY COUNCIL

[illegible] the City Council last Night

WILL INSPECT THE BOOKS

An Expert Accountant Will Examine the Record for the Last Five Years

A Resolution to that Effect was Drafted and Passed

The proceedings of the city council [illegible] Alderman P W [illegible] that a [illegible] the aldermanic [illegible]

Alderman Hoyt said that it was becoming quite a serious question what should be done with the tramps and others who apply for lodging [illegible] He asked the council if it would not be a good plan to put these people to work [illegible] the city hall Alderman [illegible] objected to putting them there But Alderman Hoyt explained that the situation would be different now from what it formerly was owing to the fact that these tramps would only be kept there for one night The police committee were empowered to act in the matter

The ordinance prohibiting people from walking on the grass by the side of the walks in the city park was passed unanimously

Alderman Fitz introduced an ordinance in relation to the erection of oil tanks in the south part of town This precipitated a long discussion as to the safety of these tanks

Alderman Hogan thought the tanks were a menace to the safety despite the fact that the owners of the tanks had provided the safety appliances which were suggested by Professor Strutz

Mr Gillingham thought the matter ought to be looked into and something ought to be done He knew the people lay awake nights because of fear of a conflagration He believed the ordinance should be referred to a committee and the whole matter of oil tanks looked into

Alderman Hoyt thought the council ought to decide at once because a new company was coming in the Rocky Mountain company, and the Santa Fe had leased them ground and was about to put in a side track for them.

Alderman Taylor asked the question as to whether if a man put a house within 100 feet of oil tanks already located if such a person could collect damages from the oil company The ordinance introduced provided that no oil tanks should be placed within 300 feet of other property

The city attorney thought a man might put any building he liked on his own property but certainly could not levy blackmail on any oil or other company The matter was referred to committee on police to report.

Alderman Taylor asked that the city attorney prepare a bill to be presented to the members-elect of the legislature from El Paso county asking them to use all efforts to have such a law passed to allow cities of this class to vacate any part of the public streets which they see fit, for use as a public park. Mr. Taylor stated that his idea was to protect Nevada avenue—that is its central part from trespassers. He wished it fenced in and made a park Now anybody could use the central part at will. Mr Taylor's motion passed

An ordinance creating a meat inspector was referred to Alderman Dunbar and the city attorney

Alderman Dunbar introduced a resolution to the effect that an expert be employed to look over the city clerk's books for three or five years and report to the finance committee. The council wanted to go back for seven years on the books and have a thorough investigation

Alderman Taylor objected to the introduction of the resolution He thought the matter had been delayed purposely, and if the committee had acted as it should have done it would have been ready to report on the city's books. He objected to the introduction of the resolution at the present time because the committee had not considered it. He didn't believe it was necessary to have an expert and he did not believe the people wished to go to any such expense The finance committee contained one of the best experts in the city He urged that the right thing to do was to allow the finance committee to meet and look into the matter and then report to the council

Alderman Hoyt said he had been misled by statements previously made concerning the city's books He believed the members of the finance committee were competent to examine the clerk's books. He thought it would be a good plan for the committee to examine the city's books and become better acquainted with them.

Alderman Gillingham said that no man knew anything of the books for the last ten years. He made a motion that a special committee be appointed to employ an expert accountant

Mr Taylor said that he had never been notified of the meeting of the finance committee and he thought the resolution of Mr. Dunbar was entirely out of order because the committee could have brought in a satisfactory report if they had been notified in time. He objected to the employment of an expert without consultation on the subject. Alderman Dunbar proceeded to correct Alderman Taylor regarding his statement that the committee had not been called together Alderman Taylor did not stand corrected, however, and so a long discussion ensued as to who had cast reflections upon the other.

Alderman Gillingham finally withdrew his motion asking for the appointment of a special committee. Alderman Dunbar's motion then passed and the expert will be employed. Aldermen Taylor and Hoyt voted in the negative. The council then adjourned

Financial Troubles in Spain

PARIS Nov. 21.—The Banque De Paris et De Pay Bas has advanced the Spanish government 25,100,000 francs, making in all 75,000,000 francs advanced by the bank The bank made a condition of the loan that the cortes should meet at the beginning of December and authorize the government to raise a large loan part of which shall be used to repay the bank The Spanish opposition proposes to compel a full discussion of the financial embarrassment Should the passage of the loan be delayed it may end in the suspension of the payment of interest on the national debt, the Rothschilds having already declined to advance more money It is estimated that four billion francs in Spanish securities are held in France Spanish bankruptcy coming on top of the collapse of the Panama Canal company would be a heavy blow to France.

Bank Burglars at Work

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Nov 21 —Between 11 o'clock Sunday night and 6 o'clock Monday morning the banking house of Skiles, Hearick & Co, at Ashland, Ills, was entered by burglars and robbed of nearly $3,000 in currency The thieves effected an entrance through a back window, forced their way into the vault and blew up the safe, using giant powder, it is supposed, as a small canvas bag containing some of this explosive was found in the vault this morning. The safe, which was an exceptionally fine one, was completely gutted. The thieves left $54 in silver, mostly in small change which was scattered over the floor of the vault. The booty must have been large, as almost all of the silver was twisted and beat into all kinds of shapes The employees of the bank have been at work to-day straightening the money by laying it on a piece of iron and striking it with a hammer. Fragments of a $10 and a $20 bill were found among the debris, and the thieves undoubtedly have a supply of similar bills which may be the means of their arrest Their escape is supposed to have been made with a team in the spring and [illegible] for [illegible] Ashland

There [illegible] the robbers were seen in the state early yesterday morning [illegible] direct [illegible] this city and afterwards the team and [illegible] yard directly the pitch [illegible] the robbery [illegible] has not [illegible] and it will be ready for business as here for on next Wednesday The bank has not been successfully [illegible] the particulars [illegible] left behind [illegible] together with the [illegible] of the vault

A Relic Experiment

NEW ORLEANS Nov 21—The Examiner's San Antonio special says Governor Hogg and party of state officials will arrive here Wednesday to witness the proposed experiments in throwing rain to be conducted by Gen R G Dyrenforth and party Several interesting tests were made to lay of the new explosive experiments There were two discharges fired They were not intended as experiments at rainmaking The first was a twenty pound stick of roselite It was fired on the ground four miles north of the city The detonation and concussion was much greater than Roselite the inventor of roselite had expected The windows and crockery in houses a quarter of a mile from the scene were broken Timber was badly damaged There were no rain clouds visible at the time but it was but a few minutes until they appeared and the entire sky was overcast. Another twenty pound stick was fired an hour afterward but no rain was produced The explosions to-day were very light as compared with those that are to be given when the experiments are to be begun A party of capitalists from Wyoming and Kansas are here to witness the experiments

Pension Estimates for 1893

WASHINGTON Nov 21 —There appears to be more than unusual interest attached to the forthcoming annual report of commissioner of pensions for the reason that the pension appropriation figures conspicuously in the annual budget of the government It has been pretty well understood for some time past that the estimates for the next fiscal year would show a large increase over any previous year This expectation was based on the fact of the large issue of pensions during the year consequent upon recent pension legislation which admitted to a pensionable status a very large number of soldiers who were not pensionable under the former laws. In a few days the report of General Raum will be completed, and a full statement of the condition of the pension office will be presented The statements have been made that the amount that will be required for pensions during the next fiscal year will nearly reach the enormous sum of $230,000,000. The work of compiling the figures am, however, sufficiently advanced to show that this estimate is in excess of the actual requirements.

Master-workman Powderly Re-elected.

ST LOUIS, Nov. 21.—At this afternoon's session of the Knights of Labor convention the question of leaving out the plank in reference to a graduated income tax was taken up Finally, it was decided to change the plank so as to make it read "That a graduated tax on incomes and inheritances be levied."

The convention then proceeded to the election of officers. Mr Powderly was placed in nomination for general master workman He told the convention he did not wish a re-election, and begged them to choose another general master workman. The almost universal sentiment was that the order at large demanded and that the labor cause required that he should be re-elected. The ballot showed twelve votes for Mr Powderly and six scattering Hugh Garvan was the general worthy foreman by a practically unanimous vote. John W Hayes was elected in the same manner. The election of the general executive board resulted in the election of A. W Wright, John D. Colin, John Davis and A. B McGuire, the first three being re-elected The reports of the committees on the state of the order and on legislation will probably be the principal business to-morrow's session.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 —Ex Congressman A J. Warner of Ohio, president of the American Bimetallic league to-day issued a letter to the public After the statement that the Republican policy of high protection is a failure and that the Democratic policy of tariff reform will turn out no better, the letter continues "The next issue will be the money question, nor will this issue be long delayed Its suppression by the two leading parties in the campaign just closed did not settle it. The international monetary conference which begins its session in Brussels today is an event of world wide importance. It is probable that there was never a gathering held simply for the consideration of questions of high finance which attracted such general interest as this. The growing evidence of the inability of gold alone to serve as the measure of value and the medium of exchange has been made apparent to the world by a continuous decline in the value of all kinds of the products of man's labor, and by an increasing anxiety and unrest in all commercial circles. The United States sheltered behind the artificial barrier of protection has felt this strain less perhaps than the other great nations of the world though its position as a great producer of silver and its character as a nation in which intelligence is so widely diffused and the discussion of all kinds of questions so general has given it more than the usual interest in the matter. However much Americans will differ in regard to the possibility of free coinage by the United States alone, there are very few indeed who will deny its practicability and its advantages if an international agreement can be reached. The value of silver as a money metal rests upon exactly the same footing as that of gold. Demonetize gold and it would fall in value precisely as silver has done. It is true that at the present time, under the present laws, silver has an actual value far below its value as stamped on the coin, but the same thing might be true of gold under the same conditions. Silver is flat money in part at the present time, but gold might also be flat money if, for instance, our golden eagles were stamped "Twenty Dollars." Whatever standard and whatever ratio is adopted by the international agreement, if it be our good fortune that an international agreement is reached, will undoubtedly determine the standing of silver. Whether that ratio is to be 16 to 1, or 15½ to 1, or 20 to 1 is altogether a minor consideration. If the agreement is adopted, under any ratio which has the least chance before the conference, the silver coin will rise at once to a parity with the gold coin and will continue there so long as the nations of the earth are agreed to recognize it as legal tender at its face value. But however desirable such an agreement would be, it is by no means certain, we can hardly say that it is probable. Not only will many conflicting interests have to be compromised before an agreement can be reached in the conference, but it will afterwards be necessary to secure the ratification of the proposed plan by the nations. Such a ratification of a plan for the absolute free and unlimited coinage of silver is almost hopeless under present circumstances. The most that can be reasonably expected is some plan for the enlarged use of silver, by which its value may be advanced and brought nearer the present face value of silver coins. In this way progress in the cause of bimetallism may be made, and one step having been taken, the way will be easier towards the complete restoration of silver to its place as a money metal equal with gold.

One of the most important of the acts of the Western Slope congress was the passage of a resolution in which it was stated that the congress was opposed to all unjust railroad legislation. It was recognized that special circumstances might exist in special cases which might call for legislative interference. In the northern part of the state, for instance, it is a well known fact that certain communities have good reason for feeling that there has been unjust discrimination against them, and there is apparent justice in their demands for relief. It was probably these circumstances which prevented the passage of a resolution much stronger in its language against the adoption of hostile railroad legislation at this particular time. The argument which was brought before the congress with especial emphasis was that Colorado needs more railroads. There are a great many of the rich mountain districts and even some of the prairie counties which are totally without accommodations in this respect, while there is scarcely any community which does not have a pet project of railway construction now pending from which it hopes to derive great benefit and gain. Denver for instance wants another line to the south. Colorado Springs is impatient for additional facilities to the east, the north west and the southeast counties of the state are wholly unprovided for. The construction of these additional railroads depends entirely on outside capital and that capital will certainly not be employed in this way if unjust and unwise laws are passed. In Iowa the adoption of such laws put a complete stop to railway construction so that for a twelve month there was not five miles of main line built in the state. Furthermore it is a well known fact that none of the Colorado roads have been paying dividends, and that their owners have expended entirely for returns for their investment on the future growth of the state. There is also another thing that ought to be considered and that is that the railroads have not waited until they were paying dividends before making considerable reductions in both passenger and freight rates. This has been done in measure as the business has increased and without compulsory legislation. The general assembly ought therefore to be exceedingly careful about any legislation of this kind. If we had as many miles of railroad as we wished, or if those roads were prosperous and dividend paying and if their tariffs were generally excessive and oppressive, there might be good reason for action by the assembly, but under the present circumstances it would be most unfair and most unjust to interfere with the earning capacity of the roads which have done so much to advance the prosperity of the different parts of the state and which have generally been so fair and reasonable in their dealings with the people.

Notable among the books of the quadricentennial year will remain the one which Mr Hamilton W Mabie has prepared for publication under the title of The Memorial Story of America. The book is neither a history nor a description and yet it is both and gives as could scarcely result from any other plan a complete and accurate summary of the progress of the American people in every way and through all the vicissitudes of the four hundred years which have intervened from the discovery by Columbus to the present time. The plan of the book is to treat of different subjects in different chapters. One chapter for instance tells of the early explorers another of the improvements in dwellings, in cities another relates the history of the great rebellion, another treats of the problems of finance which have confronted the nation at various times and still another gives an account of the great inventions which have played so important a part in American progress. Mr Mabie, during his stay in this city last summer established his reputation most firmly here as a writer of exquisite taste and style and his admirers will delight in finding these same graces in the chapters which come from his pen, but in addition to these many chapters which deal of subjects which are of especial importance are the work of acknowledged authorities in particular lines. Senator Dawes for instance, contributes a chapter on the Indian question, Congressman Breckenridge of Kentucky writes of the old South and the new, Miss Willard writes of "The American Woman" and Bishop Vincent has a chapter on the American church. The book in both design and execution is admirable and cannot fail to play an important part, both in giving to those who are unacquainted with American history and institutions a more accurate idea of the peculiarities of our country than could be gained from any other volume, and also in awakening to greater activity those sentiments of pride and patriotism which ought to rule in every American heart. The book is sold only by subscription, and an agent has been appointed for this city. We have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers as a good book, an interesting book and a valuable book. No better work could be put into the hands of young readers, and older ones will find in it a rare charm and a great amount of useful information.

In the few months that remain to the Republican administration and to the Republican majority in the senate they might do several things that would greatly surprise the country. They might for instance, with the assistance of the Democratic house pass a bill for free silver, they might begin the work of tariff reduction and repeal the McKinley bill, leaving an enormous deficit in the revenues of the government to confront the incoming administration, they might extend the operations of the civil service reform act in such a way as to disappoint the hopes of a great many hungry Democrats. They might do a great many other things that would cause a great deal of comment and excitement. But the probabilities are that they will do none of these things. By the vote of the country the Democratic party has been intrusted with the task of carrying out certain measures of unusual difficulty. It is proposed to reverse the whole economical and financial system of the government, and to do it in a way that will work harm to none and benefit to all. Republicans may well shrink from any entanglement in such a task, and remain quite content to do no more than watch the attempts of the Democrats to perform their promises calmly confident of the revulsion of feeling which will come from the failure of their experiments.

Indications accumulate that the coming holiday season is to be a very prosperous one in Colorado Springs. It would be still more so if everyone could sell his Cripple Creek stocks, but the fact is that few people are anxious to sell those stocks. Many of them are certain to prove good investments, and some even of those which are mostly the subject of ridicule are likely to surprise their detractors some day. But aside from this the very prosperous season has left a considerable amount of surplus money here, and the city is as full as possible of guests at the present time. We have good and substantial reasons then for expecting a prosperous trade this winter and a notable activity in real estate in the spring.

Governor elect Waite certainly has an independent way of expressing his opinions which is not out of place in one who owes his election to the independent vote. The opinion is gaining ground that the next governor of Colorado will be Judge Waite in reality as well as in name.

The true cause of the landslide at the recent election has been brought to light. It was the comet.

The new main and headgate which the Larimer and Weld Reservoir Company is building at Terry lake will be of the most substantial and durable character. It is laid as well as anything in the first rock. The ditch company dash against it for years with diamond fury without moving it. It is a matter of congratulation for all parties concerned. The contract for driving 1,000 feet on the main Durant tunnel was let yesterday to Alfred Champion, Anthony Lato and James Keller, the bid of these gentlemen being satisfactory to the officials of the company. Work under the contract will be begun at once and will be rapidly pushed to the limit and it is but a question of a short time before the boundless rich ores of Aspen mountain will be running down through the tunnel to the cars waiting to transport them to the smelters. The work of extending the tracks of the Colorado Midland and Rio Grande railroads to the mouth of the tunnel will be at once pushed to completion.—Aspen Leader.

George Grill and Lawrence Maher have been employed by the Black Hawk Mining company of Greeley for the past five years in operating their four mines at Manhattan. Last Friday after loading five drill holes with giant powder and starting the fuses of the lower three, the upper two failed to properly ignite and dickering with them they failed to get away in time and the concussion occurringly by the explosion of the lower three charges killed both of the miners. Mr Grill leaves a wife and two bright little boys. Both these gentlemen were old timers and old miners. Mr Grill owning considerable property in the camp.—Greeley Sun.

"Why is it that English people take so little interest comparatively in the town which produced such a genius?

"Well, I cannot account for it, except possibly on the theory that one is never so likely to visit what is always within one's reach as are those who go to a strange country with the special object of sightseeing." Why, on this very steamer I have met an American who told me that, although his home is close to New York, he has never visited even Metropolitan Museum of Art in Central park except once, while he has been a number of times to the British museum, and repeatedly to the Louvre. Now, I fancy that if he lived a few hundred miles from New York, and occasionally went there to "see the sights," he would have a much more intimate knowledge of the museum than he has now, when it is within his reach every day, or at least every week."—New York Tribune.

"Very" with a Verb.

"Pleased," in the expression "very pleased," is nothing more than the past participle passive of "please" used as an adjective. "Very," so far as I am aware, is never used with any other part of a verb, and then only when that part has become adjective by usage. The following quotation from Pope's "Dunciad" shows its use as an adjective:

Thou triumph'st, Victor of the high wrought day,
And the pleas'd dame, soft smiling, lean't away.

A similar use of the word is when we say a person's face has "a pleased expression." This being the case it is as correct to say "very pleased" as to say "very much pleased." Annandale's "Imperial Dictionary," subject "Very," has: "Among old writers very was frequently used alone to modify a past participle, and it is still to some extent so used; thus, Sir W. Jones has 'very concerned;' Gibbon, 'very unpalliated;' Sydney Smith, 'very altered,' etc."

As there is no verb unpalliate, unpalliated can be nothing else but an adjective, and concerned and altered come under the same part of speech. When we say, "I am very pleased," there is no action implied, but there is simply a description of the state or condition in which one is at the time of speaking.—F. C. Birkbeck Terry in Notes and Queries.

Dismissed.

A lady with a long train to her dress was walking along the street when an old colored man stepped on her train with both feet, tearing it badly. The lady was very angry, and had the old man arrested for being disorderly.

"What has the prisoner been guilty of?" asked the judge.

"He was disorderly, your honor."

"Who is the complaining witness?"

"Here, your honor," and a lady was brought forward and regularly sworn.

She told with much asperity how the old man at the bar had stepped on the train of her dress, tearing it, and when he saw the damage he had done, instead of apologizing, he had tried to get away.

"Who represents the prisoner?"

"He pleads his own cause."

The old man was brought forward, a mild mannered old fellow, wearing spectacles and looking the embodiment of good natured dignity.

"It's dis way, judge, concernin dis lady. Here's a p'sonable case: S'pose I walk along de street wid my coat tail spread out on de sidewalk, two, free feet, as prond as a peacock, neber lookin behind, and dat lady come an jes' plant her two dear little sweet bits of feet on dat coat tail, yon t'ink I goin to make a fuss an get dat nice lady 'rested? You t'ink so, judge?"

"I think," said the complaining witness at this moment, "that I have made a mistake. If the case is dismissed, I will pay the costs."

The case was dismissed.—Macon Telegraph.

A CLEAR CASE.

It has been proven beyond all question of a doubt that Oregon Kidney Tea will cure all cases kidney and urinary troubles, pains in the back, diabetes, inflammation of the bladder, nervousness and all complaints arising from a diseased or debilitated state of the kidneys or urinary organs of either sex.

The drinking of alkali or impure water will in time weaken and derange the urinary organs of the strongest constitutions, bringing on a diseased condition that may in time prove disastrous, but this evil effect of bad water or changed climate may be counteracted by the use of Oregon Kidney Tea. It is pleasant to take and a trial will convince you of its merits.

A DANGEROUS QUOTATION.

Never Use a Newspaper Joke as Your Own.

Kitty Winston had been struck by a joke she read in a newspaper. It read something like this:

"She—Oh, you dear boy, I could hug you for that!

"He (enthusiastically)—Come on, then!

"She (backing off)—Oh, I said I could—but I won't.

Kitty thought this joke was just too cute for anything. It was such an audacious playing with fire and then retreating with unscorched fingers.

She determined to use it herself at the first opportunity. Her chance soon came.

One afternoon Tom De Witt called and informed her that he had succeeded in obtaining tickets for an opera which she wanted very much to see.

"Oh, You dear boy," she exclaimed brightly, "I could hug you for that!"

Such a hint to a man like Tom was as good as a formal invitation.

In an instant she was in his arms, and a liberal number of ardent kisses were pressed upon her lips.

Kitty was the color of a Harvard stand at a football game before she succeeded in freeing herself from his embrace. Then she said indignantly: "How dare you! You had no right to take such an advantage of me! I was just getting off a joke I read in the paper the other day. I was going to say that I could hug you but—I won't."

"And was that the way the joke read?" asked he, with an amused smile.

"Yes," answered Kitty as she caught her breath.

"Well," returned Tom reflectively, "don't you think that fellow, the one in the paper, you know, must have been dead slow."

And the moral of this little story is never to use a newspaper joke as though it were your own.—Harry Romaine in Life.

Always Sensible.

A good story is told of a late Dublin doctor, famous for his skill and also his great love of money. He had a constant and enriching patient in an old shopkeeper in Dame street. This old lady was terribly rheumatic and unable to leave her sofa. During the doctor's visit she kept a pound note in her hand, which duly went into Dr. C—'s pocket. One morning he found her lying dead on the sofa. Sighing deeply, the doctor approached, and taking her hand in his he saw the fingers closed on his fee.

"Poor thing," he said as he pocketed it; "sensible to the last!"—Tit-Bits.

A CLEAR CASE.

It has been proven beyond all question of a doubt that Oregon Kidney Tea will cure all cases kidney and urinary troubles, pains in the back, diabetes, inflammation of the bladder, nervousness and all complaints arising from a diseased or debilitated state of the kidneys or urinary organs of either sex.

The drinking of alkali or impure water will in time weaken and derange the urinary organs of the strongest constitutions, bringing on a diseased condition that may in time prove disastrous, but this evil effect of bad water or changed climate may be counteracted by the use of Oregon Kidney Tea. It is pleasant to take and a trial will convince you of its merits.

A Carriage Accident

Mrs. Rhinelander of Elgin, Ill who is visiting at Colorado City with her daughter, Gertie, for the latter's health, while out driving last evening, met with an accident that may confine her to her room for some time. Driving down Tejon st the horse became frightened at a flash of light made by a passing electric car and started to run. Mrs Rhinelander had control of him, however, until meeting the Salvation army on Huerfano street, when the beating of the drums and cymbals and singing scared the horse again and he turned sharply around, nearly upsetting the carriage, and started up Huerfano street. Mrs Rhinelander had the horse nearly under control at Cascade avenue, but in some way he was turned into a tree near the corner, throwing both occupants out The daughter escaped without injuries but Mrs Rhinelander was thrown out on her head and shoulders and knocked unconscious. She was quickly revived and insisted upon going home to Colorado City She was unable to walk but was placed in the carriage which was uninjured and driven home by one of the bystanders

A Pleasant Entertainment

The afternoon tea at the El Paso club yesterday was a great success It is quite an innovation for a gentlemen's club to give such an entertainment, but it proved quite as successful as it was novel The ladies of Colorado Springs are quite favored in this respect, beyond those of their sisters in almost any other city

The reception was held from 3.30 to 6 o'clock and about 200 ladies and gentlemen were present Mrs. Solly, Mrs. Lunt and other wives of the directors acted as the reception committee, and received their guests in the large drawing room Handsome cut flowers and potted plants filled the room. The club was given over entirely to the guests and the ladies wandered at will through the handsome rooms.

A Handsome Club.

It is only three or four years since Messrs J J Hagerman, R. W. Tansill and others of this city became interested in the Pecos valley, New Mexico, but since that time Colorado Springs interests have grown in that section until any bit of news from this new and thriving community is received with the greatest interest Colorado Springs interests in the Pecos valley now aggregate millions of dollars. The Eddy Argus of last Friday contains a long article descriptive of the annual reception of the Eddy club This club is composed of prominent business men of Eddy and Colorado Springs. It has recently moved into new quarters in the Tansill building, a handsome two-story brick erected by Mr R. W Tansill The descriptions and cuts show the club to be a very handsome and complete affair, and of great credit to the little city Rowling through the list of members one can hardly believe the club is such a great distance from Colorado Springs Among the names are C C Blodgett, W P Bonbright, J J Hagerman, Percy Hagerman, C S Ludlam, C A Otis, J S Stevens and R. W Tansill

The reception was a great success in every way, and among the guests were W P Bonbright and W F Fisher
